

PHILADELPHIA BUSINESS JOURNAL

Friday, October 1, 2010

Blog: Tourism, Media & Marketing

Phila. Neighborhoods have their own restaurant week

by Peter Van Allen Staff Writer

Center City Restaurant Week is over and now the neighborhoods will hold their version.

Philly Neighborhood Food Week, now in its second year, will feature restaurants in Northern Liberties and Manayunk, on Penn's Landing and along Ogontz Avenue, East Passyunk, West Passyunk, South Street and City Avenue. In Delaware County, Darby Township is also involved.

As the event likes to say, Center City is not Philadelphia's only dining destination. Indeed, the event's creator, Charisse McGill of Ardent Management, started Philly Neighborhood Food Week "to showcase restaurants in neighborhoods typically overlooked and underestimated as reputable food centers."

Twenty-five restaurants will participate.

Philly Neighborhood Food Week will be held Oct. 10-16. Restaurants will offer prix fixe menus at $20 to $30 per person.